Active Reading and Annotation Methods:

1. Highlight key information, significant quotes, or any parts of the text relating to themes, significant characters, or events.
2. While you read, make notes in the margins about key material. You can use punctuation marks such as stars, arrows, question marks, check marks, and brackets to mark the text that you may want to come back to.
3. At the end of each chapter, summarize the main ideas/events in the chapter. It is also useful to put titles on top of pages where significant events are happening so you can easily refer back to a certain part in the book.
4. You may use the inside front cover of the book to keep a list of important information with page number references in the book. Some examples of what you could list here are themes, text that connects to the book's title, important names of characters, memorable quotes, or key questions you may have about the text.
